Introduction

The Laboratory APS, Society, Education and Health of Hassiba Benbouali of Chlef University has the pleasure and privilege to organize the 2nd International Congress in partnership with The International Association of Motor Praxeology (AIPRAM).

The congress of Chlef (Algeria) is the first international event on Motor Praxeology which will be held in Africa. It constitutes a succession of scientific events already organized, namely: Ten international seminars in Europe, Four in South America. The first International Congress has taken place in Manaus (Brazilia) on 2014.

It proposes in inventory of more than 50 years of work and a reflection around the most relevant and the most up-to-date topics in the domain of Motor Praxeology, developed by the distinguished sociologist and ex Dean of the Faculty of Social Sciences of the Sorbonne University, Professor Pierre Parlebas.

The purpose of this opportunity is to present some studies dealing with body practices, to open up new channels and to develop research tools, contents and higher education training programmes from the perspective of Motor Praxeology.

This paradigm has established itself with specific theoretical models full of dynamism and development all over the world, by relying on the other disciplines reports.

Moreover, it gives opportunity for a critical look in order to identify issues and challenges and will enable us to bring internationally reputed practitioners and researchers together with young researchers of different backgrounds in order to present lectures, round tables, workshops and the presentation of oral communications.

This event represents a real opportunity for strengthening the exchange between researchers and students, by promoting the establishment of important agreements and partnerships, allowing the creation of new research networks in the domain, especially in the Maghreb, Arab and African level.

Research axes

1. Motor Praxeology, specificity or multidisciplinary: paradigm itinerary.
2. Motor action, between internal and external logic, for a systemic approach.
3. Motor action of cultural to intercultural.
4. physical education in question, Praxeology perspectives: optimization, motor conduct evaluation and development of content and higher education training programs.
5. Motor Praxeology, Sport and performance.
6. Personal and emotional well-being in the perspective of the Motor Praxeology.
7. Towards a compared Motor Praxeology.

NB:

- Possibility to present online communications.
- Please, insist on the necessity of experimental researches and field work (with presentation of findings)

Registration fee and support

Research professor: 5000 DZD
Student in post-graduation: 3000 DZD
Other:10.000 DZD

AIPRAM and APSSSES laboratory members are exempt from registration fees.
